General Comments

The rooms are well provisioned with a variety of play materials. Upon entering the facility from school, the children are invited to a sitting area which is styled like a living room space. Here they chat about their day with each other and with the educators and hear about the daily activities being offered - today they are making salt-dough ornaments. Opportunities for free play are also available and children were observed reading books, making puzzles, eating snack and playing with a fuse ball table.

Ratios were respected and educators were observed circulating throughout the space.
