General Comments

I was accompanied by Jenelle Hanscom for the monitoring inspection.

Children were participating in a number of activities during the morning- I Spy Beach Game, Art creations with paper, glue, and collage materials, reading in the Library, and dramatic play with barbies.

Children were provided with large amounts of time to play with what they were interested in and the educator continued to place invitations on the table to offer different choices. Ocean themed sensory buckets were set out after snack and children could play with them throughout the morning.

The parent information boards are well thought out with all required posting in addition to programming, evidence of learning documentation and information about the educators.

The smaller rooms allowed for children to space out and each room had a large variety of materials that were age appropriate and accessible for the children. The library had rugs and lamps with a shelf of series of different books. The educator shared that they have added extra smaller toys to the rooms that are of interest to the children such as LOL Dolls. The shelves also had long-term projects of Lego and creations that the children can save to work on during different days.

Children washed hands before snack and the educator sat with the children during snack to engage in conversation. Child guidance was positive and the educator spoke to the children in a respectful way and provided reminders to children in a kind way.

Please remember to use absence codes on the attendance forms to track reasons children are not attending.

It was noted that an evacuation posting is at the door in the dramatic playroom but there was not one at the front entrance. Please add one to the front foyer.
