General Comments

The children were getting for morning snack when I arrived. The snack was waffles, bananas and milk. The children told me they were looking at picture books in the morning and creating their own stories by looking at the pictures.

After snack the children and operator got ready for outdoor play time. Sunscreen was applied to the children will outside.

Due to the hot weather the operator set up the water sprinkler pad for the children play in. One child decided to wash the little tykes cars inside of playing in the water sprinkler.

During the time outside the operator offered the children numerous water and shade breaks. After the children were finished playing in the in the sprinkler pad, they had some free play time so they could dry off before going inside for lunch.

There is evidence of purposely planned programing as seen by the learning stories and artwork posted on the walls.

The children seem comfortable in the environment and familiar with the daily routine.

The operator was observed advising children of transitions from one activity to another.
