General Comments

Children were playing quietly on the carpet and at the table upon arrival of Quality Assurance Monitor. Children were all engaged and were observed using Lincoln logs and stacking toy. The educators had written on the white board which children thought the Groundhog had seen their shadow yesterday and which ones did not think he saw his shadow.

School age children were observed transitioning into the facility. One educator met the children at their cubbies in the hall while the other educator stayed with the children in the classroom. Children washed their hands upon arrival and were permitted to eat an afternoon snack from their lunch box.

Educators engaged in pleasant conversation with the children throughout the inspection.

Many different forms of art were visible in the room and displayed nicely. Heart paintings, ten on the sled illustrations, colored snowflakes, puffy paint and cotton balls were used as art mediums for the children to explore.

Educators were observed providing effective communication with families to support all children. A written Essential Routine Services and Emergency Plan is required for ongoing observation of certain health conditions, please ensure this is on file.

Positive behaviour guidance was observed at all times, a well-established routine was observed and educators modeled appropriate behaviour for the children.
