General Comments

Upon arrival to facility the children were playing in the lower level of the home where the Operator has set up an environment specifically for the children. There is a living room area, tables, low shelving where the children can easily access their materials. There is a wide variety of materials such as art materials, manipulatives, dramatic play, dinosaurs and blocks just to name a few.

The Operator remains completely engaged with the children, always putting their needs first. The operator speaks to the children at their level, helps them to use their words while guiding their actions especially if the behaviours are a bit more challenging.

The Operator says that they start with an empty calendar and adds to it as the week progresses depending on the interests of the children. Licensing staff observed learning being brought to the park with the children. Prior to the children's day, the operator placed the numbers of 1 to 10 throughout the trail at the public park. As the children walked through the woods they found those numbers. At the end of the walk, the Operator had a book to share with the children.

At this time, there were two other homes involved in the outdoor process. Head counts were observed, and each operator took responsibility for their group however the outdoor learning was combined and inclusive.

All documents for licensing were easily verified and were organized.

Licensing staff can recommend facility for licensing.
