General Comments

Upon QAM's arrival, a group of children were outdoors snowshoeing around the property under the supervision of their educator. Inside, several children were engaged in creating medals as part of an ongoing project in preparation for their group's upcoming Olympics Day. Other children were participating in a sensory play invitation using clay.

The indoor learning environment was well-equipped and thoughtfully arranged, offering a variety of materials for art, a designated reading corner, and areas for building with blocks and LEGO. The space was clean, organized, and conducive to independent exploration and creative learning.
