General Comments

Upon licensing staff's arrival, children were having snack on the front porch having snack at the picnic table. Operator serves snacks- snack today was cheese, crackers, apple slices and water to drink. The operator added a small vase of wildflowers to the table. The porch also had a child-sized lawn chair and rocking chair that the children used after their snack.

The indoor playroom had tables with learning invitations to encourage mark-making and process art. Tissue paper, glue, scissors, and a variety of other paper were accessible for children to use. Learning stories and documentation were posted that make numerous connections to the curriculum.

The operator followed the lead of the children. Children were pretending the tissue paper were story books and the operator made up stories. She engaged in the children's imaginative play and asked open-ended questions to extend their play.

Moments throughout the morning were used to expand on conversations on friendships, teamwork and families. During snack, the operator also talked about mindfulness with the children, explaining how they could sit and listen to the birds, hear the crunch of their snack and enjoy the taste.

Before lunch, the operator asked the children if they would like to choose a book for her to read. One child chose a children's magazine. The operator found a poem in the magazine to read.

Documents are organized in a binder and were easily verified. Cleaning checklists, monthly fire drills, and first aid supplies checklists are complete and up to date.
