General Comments
This was my first visit to Rainbow of Cultures. I was greeted by the administrative staff and given a tour of the centre. In the Afterschooler Room, children were finishing snack and playing a game of foosball. Children were eager to show me their artwork and current programming and documentation was evident in the room. In the 3/4 and 2/3 room, children were waking up from nap. The room has a smooth transition from nap to playtime. Educators were seen speaking softly to the children and engaging with them. Evidence of programming was also seen in this room and educators are using a web to purposefully plan their weeks. The administrator shared with me that she will be implementing staff meetings to discuss the curriculum and how staff can connect it to their learning stories. Rainbow of Cultures has over 12 languages represented so staff are working hard to think of ideas to document in a way that represents the child's language and culture.
