General Comments
A Monitoring Inspection was completed in the After School program. Due to it being a snow day, school aged children were at the facility all day. Children were observed outside, playing in the snow. Children were observed sliding, building snowmen, creating an igloo with the use of tarps and a climbing structure, and making colorful snow, with water and food coloring. Inside, there were several well-defined learning centers, some of which included the following: reading, building, a well-stocked arts and crafts center, a science and math center, as well as a board game center. Several forms of documentation were observed throughout the classroom. Educator showed QAM the art creations that were made this morning - the children made and painted several different planets, and they were in the process of naming and writing descriptions of their planets. Several photos and descriptions of outdoor activities were also observed.
