General Comments

As I arrived for the Monitoring Inspection, the operator was preparing the children to walk to the park. At the park, the children had experiences to practice independence with climbing and sliding. The operator stood beside the equipment to offer assistance and celebrated the success and accomplishments along with the children.

Upon return from the park, all the children washed hands before lunch. Lunch today was peanut butter sandwiches, yogurt, buttered noodles and white beans. The operator communicates any changes to the menu with parents.

The indoor play space has different play areas. There is a cozy reading area with many accessible books for the children. There is an area for building with a lego table and a kitchen area with other shelves that have baskets of various materials. The operator has added the children's art work and creations to the walls and there is also a large display of photos from throughout the summer.

The operator used many different forms of child guidance that is suitable to the situation. She used enthusiasm, redirection, singing and lots of patience. She had a strong rapport with the children in her care and the children seemed comfortable going to her when they need reassurance or comforting.

Child profile forms were checked and all required information was included. The files were organized and easy to verify.
