General Comments

The preschool and afterschool children were outside when I arrived. The infant and two-year-old Children were getting ready for outdoor play time. Since this was my first time at this facility the administrator gave me a tour of the facility and the large outdoor play space. The classrooms and clean and organized. There are a variety of natural and "home-like" materials such as small armchairs, sofa's, wooden shelves, rugs and plants that make the space warm and inviting. The children participated in a variety of activities while outside. The two-year-old group tried to catch bubbles from the bubble machine. The infant group played in the wooden house and marked with chalk. The 3-year-old children had circle time under the tree on the lawn, then walked to the tall grass to pick flowers before going to the shaded area to play in the fort. The preschool and afterschool children were in the wooded area, where they were observed climbing trees, sitting on the tree teeter totter, playing with trucks, dolls and cooking in the play kitchen. The educators were engaged and were observed encouraging the children then they were attempting to do something. An example of this was when one of the infants was trying to stand on their own and take a step. There is a mutual respect between the children and educators at the facility.
