General Comments

ASP Observation

Educators reported to QAM that children have shown increased interest in STEAM activities, crafts, and coloring. During the observation, children were engaged in coloring, eating snacks, and participating in dramatic play. Educators were present and interacting appropriately with the children throughout the space. The environment contained a variety of materials, including art supplies, dramatic play items, fort-building materials, cars, and LEGO. Documentation related to fire prevention, family engagement, and other activities was displayed on the walls.

Preschool Observation

The Preschool room occupies the same physical space as the ASP room; however, materials and invitations are arranged specifically for preschool-aged children, and only half of the room is utilized. At the time of the observation, the Preschool group was attending a scheduled visit to the library. The group visits the library every second Thursday to complete a craft, have a snack, and participate in parachute play. The educator was observed interacting with the children and applying appropriate child-guidance practices.
