General Comments The children were finishing morning snack when I arrived. The operator had planned an activity with the light table to do after snack time, but the children had a lot of energy, so she decided it was best to take the children outside and do the activity at another time. While outside the children were observed playing a magnetic fishing game at the picnic table, drawing with chalk, blowing bubbles, going through an obstacle course made of tires and stepping blocks, and playing on the teeter totter. As the children were getting hungry the operator brought the children in for lunch. They washed their hands and sat at the table to eat. After lunch there was time for free play activities before nap/quiet time. The children were observed playing hairdresser, paw patrol and building with wooden and magnetic blocks. A light table, tuff tray and a weather/calendar wall have been added to the indoor space since the last inspection. During the visit, positive child guidance techniques were noticed. When needed the operator would get down to eye level of the child and talk to them. She explained to the child why they could not do a certain activity. She advised the children to use their words when they got discouraged or upset. It is recommended that more sand be added to the sandbox and the fire extinguisher gets the yearly service check.
