General Comments

Preschool aged children were in the outdoor play space when I arrived. They were observed playing in the house, "making muffins", rolling snowballs, playing on the climbing dome and other play structure. The infant group was inside having snack and engaged in some free play activities. The educators were observed sitting on the floor playing and reading stories to the children. There is evidence of planned programming as seen by the learning stories posted throughout the facility. There are calendars on the walls in each room showing what is planned for the day. Children's artwork and family photos were also posted throughout the facility. Staff files were reviewed, all contained the required documents.
