General Comments

Upon arriving at the facility, the three- and four-year-olds were getting ready to have lunch outside in the playground. The two other age groups were sleeping during the monitoring inspection.

The educators were observed sanitizing the tables and helping the children open their lunch containers. The children were supervised at all times during lunch. After, the educators brought groups of children inside to use the washroom and wash their hands. Proper ratios were maintained, and the educators were heard completing head counts before going in and out of the building.

Later, the children engaged in free play activities outside such as climbing on structures, water and mud play, playing with sports equipment and dramatic play in the two playhouses. Various and sufficient outdoor play materials were observed. The educators were observed engaging in the children's activities and interests by playing with them. An educator noticed a group of children sitting at a table and offered them some arts and crafts materials while outside. The educators were heard encouraging the children to share resources and to keep their hands to themselves while playing. The educators were in touch with the children's needs by offering water, wiping noses and encouraging the children to keep their jackets on while outside as it was a cold day.

No safety hazards were observed on the playground. The educators were observant and caring towards the children. When one child got hurt while playing, an educator was observed kneeling and hugging the child while asking if he was ok. The educator checked the child for any visible marks or blood and completed an incident report. The parents were also called and notified of the incident. The children were encouraged to take frequent water, and washroom breaks while playing outside.

The indoor environment was clean and well organized. The indoor environment had various and sufficient play materials located on low accessible shelves. Age-appropriate books and a variety in seating options was available to the children. Recent "fall harvest" arts and crafts was posted on a bulletin board along with pictures of the children engaging in activities.
